Assignment 1: Rewrite Outcomes

ENGL 2210 Outcomes

A.	Project Planning	You will read, plan out, and write technical documents (such as scientific reports, articles, and presentations), either as a group or by yourself.
B.	Project Analysis	You will increase your awareness of how a document will be received by different communities and cultures, and will use this awareness to better reach out to these audiences.
C.	Content Development	You will see how working within the framework of a genre affects the way you write, and you will use this along with context to be able to include specific information within that genre.
D.	Organizational Design	You will fine-tune your research questions and practices to obtain the valuable information from firsthand and secondhand sources.
E.	Written Communication	You will write in a fashion that is clear, with correct grammar and punctuation, and in a manner that addresses your audience's needs.
F.	Visual Communication	You will understand your audience well so that you can use visual aids (such as tables, charts, graphs) to present your audience the needed information in a form they can easily understand.
G.	Reviewing and Editing	You will review and proofread (and at times be reviewed by others) to ensure that your work is free from spelling, grammatical and other stylistic errors across different contexts and goals.
H.	Content Management	You will become familiar working within programs and software to learn how information is presented and managed in online platforms, social networking, and databases.
I.	Production and Delivery	You will get better at delivering and presenting the gathered information to your audience via different methods such as sending digital copies, written hard copies, giving oral presentations, and making videos.